Ideas for the real-world laboratory „1A Lage“

How should city centers develop in the future? What role do issues such as climate, mobility, trade, culture and housing play? And how can we make the city center a common place for everyone?

In 2024 the „1A Lage“ – a real-world laboratory as part of the AKUT project – will open in Königstrasse, offering space for new ideas for use and experiments. In the middle of Stuttgart's shopping mile, a place for exchange and experimentation is to be. In the spirit of a diverse, sustainable and active city center, uses such as workshops, lectures, exhibitions and more can be implemented. We are looking for ideas that address the city center and its transformation and local needs of the neighborhood.

Do you have an idea but no space to try it out?

We offer free space for testing, networking and creating synergies. At Königstrasse 1A, a total of 300m² is available on two levels. Send your idea in the reply form below to einsA.Lage@stuttgart.de.

Based on the submissions we will put together a usage program. Further ideas can also be submitted after the deadline or after the opening of the space directly on site without obligation.
